The adjusted R^2 gives us some idea of how well our model generalizes and ideally we'd like its value to be the same as, or very close to, the value of R^2 . In this example the difference for the final model is small (it is $0.665 - 0.660 = 0.005$ or about 0.5%). This shrinkage means that if the model were derived from the population rather than a sample it would account for ...

What is an Interquartile Range? The interquartile range is a measure of where the "middle fifty" is in a data set. Where a range is a measure of where the beginning and end are in a set, an interquartile range is a measure of where the bulk of the values lie. That's why it's preferred over many other measures of spread (i.e. the average or median) when reporting things like school ...
