Solution Selling Bosworth

Solution selling is a sales methodology. Rather than just promoting an existing product, the salesperson focuses on the customer's problems and addresses the issue with appropriate offerings (product and services). The problem resolution is what constitutes a "solution". Solution selling is usually used in sales situations where products are just one of the elements that lead to a solution.

Stakeholders as Customers. Trentim (2013) introduces the concept that stakeholders in a project should be considered customers. In this context, the project manager wants to "sell" to stakeholders the product of the project, or the transitory state generated from the project, or the transformations the project will generate, to get something in return, which could be support, good press ...

A buffer stock scheme (commonly implemented as intervention storage, the "ever-normal granary") is an attempt to use commodity storage for the purposes of stabilising prices in an entire economy or an individual (commodity) market. Specifically, commodities are bought when a surplus exists in the economy, stored, and are then sold from these stores when economic shortages in the economy occur.
