EXPERIMENT 8 Activity Series (Single Displacement Reactions)

A single-displacement reaction, also known as a single-replacement reaction, is a reaction by which one (or more) element(s) replaces an/other element(s) in a compound. It can be represented generically as:  $A + B-C \rightarrow A-C + B$ . This will most often occur if A is more reactive than B, thus giving a more stable product. A and B must be either: Different metals (hydrogen's behavior as a cation ...

For each of these reactions, decide if the reaction actually occurs. You will need an activity series for the single replacement reactions, and a solubility table for the double replacement reactions.

Does This Reaction Happen - ScienceGeek.net

A chemical reaction is a process that leads to the chemical transformation of one set of chemical substances to another. Classically, chemical reactions encompass changes that only involve the positions of electrons in the forming and breaking of chemical bonds between atoms, with no change to the nuclei (no change to the elements present), and can often be described by a chemical equation.
